

How is privacy of communications between a defendant and counsel ensured when counsel joins the defendant in the correctional facility?
(Other responses)

Allow phone conversation prior to hearing between juvenile, parent and attorney. Also at any time during hearing if requested. Also have private chat feature that can be used during hearing

Attorney not usually present in jail facility

Cannot "ensure" privacy

counsel is not in the correctional facility, a "privacy phone" is used which mutes out the audio for others

depends on the court

Don't know

handled by each judge has not been used, it is brand new

Local Rules

Massachusetts does not have the capacity at this time to conference with outside facilities.

N/A (10)

n/a - counsel is at the court

none

Not Applicable For Our Use

Not used in this way.

not used type of communication

Private phones provided in COncference room for attorney and a phone is located in the arraignment room for the inmate

The audio line is muted during the conversation and a private line is provided between the courtroom and the correctional facility.

The defendant and counsel converse in a different room or private booth in the facility, or the audio line is muted during the conversation.

There is a private telephone available for use.

unable to answer

Unknown (2)

use is voluntary
