Recommended Family Court Data Elements

This project is supported by State Justice Institute Award No. SJI-21-P-038, Implementing National Open Court Data Standards in Pilot Courts. The opinions, findings, and recommendations expressed in this publication are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the views of the State Justice Institute.

Introduction

For courts to proactively manage individual family court (or domestic relations) cases and their caseloads as a whole, it is necessary to identify, collect, and use data effectively. This guide is intended to help courts identify the data needed and to provide data standards for family justice cases.

Family cases can present a challenge for data collection, due to the need to connect related cases, the presence of multiple issues, and the frequent reopening of cases based on changing family dynamics and circumstances. Further, family structure evolves over time, posing a need for evaluation and adaptation to data collection in the courts. Data shortcomings, as well as trends in handling domestic relations cases are documented in The Landscape of Domestic Relations Cases in State Courts (2017).

Principles of Data Collection

The Family Justice Initiative identifies data collection as one of four central goals in the Principles for Family Justice Reform.

Principle 11 of the Family Justice Initiative, “improve ongoing data collection, analysis, and use of data to inform case management” provides a guide for courts on key data issues. Some key factors to keep in mind while using the data elements in this report are listed below.

11.1 Baseline domestic relations caseload assessments and ongoing monitoring should be tailored to reflect the unique aspects of domestic relations cases and domestic relations case management.

11.2 Court data elements should be precisely defined to ensure clarity in data collection and analysis and to facilitate data standardization across courts.

11.3 Courts should follow proven practices with respect to the use of common data definitions, routine counting of cases with one or more self-represented parties and recording outcomes to enable the development and ongoing improvement of evidence-based practices.

11.4 Courts should regularly make caseload assessments available to the public.

Family cases are among the most complex. They involve interpersonal conflict, the well-being of children and may involve intimate partner violence, substance use disorder, mental health or other challenges. To support families and manage cases effectively, a number of courts across the country have implemented triage approaches to identify risk, complexity, and conflict present in cases. Effective triage also helps courts to apportion case management, time and resources accordingly. In order to assist with triaging family cases and enable courts to analyze the impacts of family innovations, courts need to collect and use key data elements. These will be highlighted throughout the document. See also the table “Key Data Elements for Triage” at the end of this document.

Using this Report

The Court Statistics Project \(CSP\)¹ and National Open Court Data Standards \(NODS\)² provide frameworks for data collection, with the goal of presenting a national picture (CSP) or working to standardize information to be able to promote data exchanges for research (NODS). This report is a complement to these other efforts and uses NODS framework and recommended data elements as a starting point. The report is divided into sections that align with the NODS organizational structure. Each section describes relevant data elements, providing additional context for family justice cases.

Not every data element from NODS is included in this report. Priority is given to those elements that are specific to family justice cases and need more context or explanation on the “how and why” for collection. Additional elements that are out of scope for NODS but nonetheless important for family justice cases are included in this report.

For easy reference, each section is labeled with the NODS tab number. Additionally, NODS data elements are in bold. Sample values from the NODS data elements spreadsheet are italicized. Elements out of scope for NODS but in this guide for case-level monitoring at the local court level are denoted with an asterisk (*).

This report does not outline every data element necessary for case management. Instead, the list aims to provide a guide for what data should be collected and initiate the conversation of what information is needed to answer policy and monitoring questions. The list is informed by past research, and by NCSC engagement with state and local courts about current, promising, and best practices. However, it may not cover all needs for a court or state. This report should be viewed as a living document. Recommendations will change, especially as courts incorporate technology solutions more fully.

Tab 1: Case Information

Family Case Types

Family case types are categorized to describe critical information about each case. The case type should be reported in the initial filing. Family case types can be complex, as many cases may include numerous actions of different types. For instance, cases that involve a dissolution/divorce of a marriage often include provisions for custody, support, alimony, and more. The case should be categorized as to the primary reason for the case. The priority is according to the order table below. See Table 3 below for an example.

For additional information on how to classify this data, see The State Court Guide to Statistical Reporting.

Table 1: Family Case Types

Family Case Type	Definition/Notes
Dissolution/Divorce	Case establishing a divorce or dissolution of a marriage or civil union. These cases often include provisions for custody, support, alimony, and the like in the decree or judgment. In reporting cases, the initial filing and disposition of a dissolution/divorce should be classified as a dissolution/divorce, even if other components are present in the judgment.
Legal Separation	Case establishing the separation of a couple, without a dissolution of the marriage.
Annulment	Case establishing a marriage as retroactively null and void.
Parentage	Case establishing the identity and/or responsibilities of a parent of a minor child
Child Custody	Cases where an individual requests that a court decide the control or care of a child. This may be known as "legal decision-making."
Child Support	Case filed to request maintenance of a minor child by a person who is required, by law, to provide such maintenance.

Child Support Enforcement IV-D	Case filed to request maintenance of a minor child by a person who is required under Title IV-D of the Social Security Act of 1973, to provide such maintenance.
Child Support Enforcement Private	Case filed to request maintenance of a minor child by a person who is required by law, but who is not under auspices of Title IV-D of the Social Security Act of 1973, to provide such maintenance. Note: Labeling a child support enforcement as private (non IV-D) distinguishes cases that are brought by private parties outside the framework of Title IV-D, to allow records and analysis of caseload qualification for financial support from the federal government through the state IV-D agency.
Emancipation	Case filed seeking independence of a minor child. ³
Spousal Support/Alimony	Case filed to request maintenance of a party/spouse by a person who is required by law to provide such maintenance.
Visitation	Case filed by an individual to request the court to schedule the time the individual will spend with minor children. Such requests can be made by parents, grandparents, or other family members. This may also be known as “parenting time.”
Termination of Parental Rights	Case requesting the severing of the parent-child relationship. ⁴
Adoption	Case involving a request for the establishment of new, permanent relationship of a parent and child between persons not biologically related. ⁵
Domestic Protection/Restraining Order	Case involving a request to issue a protection or restraining order designed to limit or eliminate the contact between two or more individuals in a domestic relationship.
Immigration	Case involving Special Immigrant Juvenile Status
Judicial Bypass	Case requesting a court order in lieu of parental permission
Surrogacy	Cases involving a contract or agreement between individuals regarding non-biological parentage.

³ In some jurisdictions, emancipation may be part of a juvenile or probate docket

⁴ In some jurisdictions, TPR petitions may be part of a juvenile docket

⁵ In some jurisdictions, adoptions may be part of a juvenile or probate docket

Domestic Relations-Other	Cases involving actions between family members, or other forms of domestic relationships, of unknown specificity, non-attributable to other categories, or as all single case types in domestic relations cases.
---------------------------------	--

Note that in domestic cases, it is not unusual to have a case filed as a “foreign judgment” case. These are cases decided in another jurisdiction but filed with the local court for purposes of enforcement.

Associated Legal Issue

Because family justice cases often include more than a single legal issue, associated issues should also be captured.

Table 2: Associated Legal Issue

Associated Legal Issue	Definition/Notes
Parentage	Case establishing the identity and/or responsibilities of a parent of a minor child
Child Custody	Cases where an individual requests that a court decide the control or care of a child
Child Support	Case filed to request maintenance of a minor child by a person who is required, by law, to provide such maintenance.
Child Support Enforcement IV-D	Case filed to request maintenance of a minor child by a person who is required under Title IV-D of the Social Security Act of 1973, to provide such maintenance.
Child Support Enforcement Private	Case filed to request maintenance of a minor child by a person who is required by law, but who is not under auspices of Title IV-D of the Social Security Act of 1973, to provide such maintenance. *Note: Labeling a child support enforcement as private (non IV-D) distinguishes cases that are brought by private parties outside the framework of Title IV-D, to allow records and analysis of caseload qualification for financial support from the federal government through the state IV-D agency.
Spousal Support/Alimony	Cases filed to request maintenance of a party/spouse by a person who is required by law to provide such maintenance.

Visitation	Case filed by an individual to request the court to schedule the time the individual will spend with minor children. Such requests can be made by parents, grandparents, or other family members.
Termination of Parental Rights	Case requesting the severing of the parent-child relationship
Adoption	Case involving a request for the establishment of new, permanent relationship of a parent and child between persons not biologically related.
Domestic Protection/ Restraining Order	Case involving a request to issue a protection or restraining order designed to limit or eliminate the contact between two or more individuals.
Domestic Relations-Other	Cases involving actions between family members, or other forms of domestic relationships, of unknown specificity, non-attributable to other categories, or as all single case types in domestic relations cases.

Table 3: Examples of case type designation and associated legal issue

Spousal support, legal separation	Legal Separation	Spousal Support

Case Flags

NODS includes case flags to capture whether certain conditions were present in cases. Although courts may collect the information in more detailed ways, this is information that is often collected only within court documents, making it difficult to retrieve in a systematic way. Regardless of how the data are collected, this information can be mapped to a flag that indicates that condition was present.

Table 4: Case flags

Data Element #	Flags	Definitions/Notes
24	Confidentiality Flag	Indication that the case indicates confidential information, including information such as legal minors, medical information, etc.
33	Contested Flag	Indication that the case was contested at some point
37	Minors Involved Flag	Indication that there are minors/children involved in the case
43	Finding of Domestic Violence Flag	Indication that there was a judicial finding of domestic violence associated with parties in the current case
44	Dependency Court Judgment Flag	Indication that there was a judicial finding in a dependency case associated with a minor/child involved in the current case (e.g., legal custody).

ICWA cases

Some family cases fall under the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA). This can affect the burden of proof for a Termination of Parental Rights case as well as for any related case. As such, the court should track if the case is an ICWA case and the date on which that determination was made. Note that there is also a child-specific ICWA flag in participant information.

Table 5: ICWA data elements

Data Element #	Data Element	Definition	Values
32	ICWA case flag	Flag to indicate there was a finding that the federal Indian Child Welfare Act is applicable in this case	Yes No
32a	ICWA date	Date that a judicial officer made a ruling that the Indian Child Welfare Act applies to this case	date

Linked cases

Multiple cases may be linked to family cases. Examples include:

- When a petition involving TPR, adoption, or guardianship is filed in a different court (such as dependency or probate)
- When the family is also involved in a dependency case due to alleged abuse or neglect of a child

- A family case in which a parent/caregiver has a criminal case
- A delinquency or status offense case involving one of the children in the case

In all of these situations, the linked case, jurisdiction, and case type should be part of the record.

Table 6: Linked cases

Data Element #	Data Element	Definition
27	Linked case	Court case identifier for any associated case
28	Linked case jurisdiction	the court of the linked case
29	Linked case type	the primary case type of the linked case

Case Filings & Dispositions

Case filing is the single best time to collect basic case information. The challenge for many courts is keeping up with information added over extended periods of time, especially in cases that will follow minor children up to adulthood. Noting a filing type for each case can help in tracking each case over time. Similarly, when the case is disposed, courts should track the case manner of disposition (jury trial, bench trial, or non-trial). Summary judgment, settlement, alternative dispute resolution, default judgment, dismissal, transfer to another court, bind over, guilty plea, Nolle prosequi, all delinquency and dependency non-trial hearings can all be categorized as non-trial dispositions.

Filing types may include new, reopened, reactivated, and transferred. A family case may be reopened for custody, visitation, or child support issues, for example. A case is reactivated if it was previously on inactive status, such as if one of the parties in a divorce case is in the military and has been deployed.

When a family justice case reopens, it may reopen with a new case type. For example, the original case may be dissolution/divorce, but the reopen case type may be child support enforcement IV-D. The new case type should be captured, but the original case type should also be retained.

Key dates to note in family cases include case initial filing date, disposition date, date of marriage/domestic partnership, and date of separation. The date of divorce will be a calculated field based on the date that a petition for divorce was granted.

Tab 2: Participants in the Case

The court should collect individual information on the participants in the case, to assist in monitoring family cases over time. Keeping track of demographic and contact information in case management systems (CMS) can help accurately identify individuals within the CMS.

Participant information to collect includes the following:

Table 7: Participant information

45	Tribal affiliation	Person's membership or affiliation with a Tribe	Federally recognized Tribes

Tab 3: Attorney/Advocates

In monitoring family cases, it is important to know the attorneys and advocates that are involved in the cases. If the parties have ever been represented, the court should keep track of the Attorney/Advocate Entry Date (first date the attorney/advocate entered the case), the Attorney/Advocate End Date (the date the attorney/advocate exited the case), and the Associated party/participants (the parties or participants that are represented or advocated for).

It may also be helpful to note the Attorney Type and Advocate Type.

Table 8: Attorney & advocate information

Data Element #	Data Element	Definition	Values
1	Attorney/Advocate Name	Full name of attorney/advocate
2	Firm Name	Attorney/advocate's firm at time of entry into the case
3	Attorney/Advocate Address	Mailing address of attorney/advocate
4	Attorney/Advocate ID Number	ID number assigned by bar, supreme court, state, court, or case management system	alphanumeric

12	Associated party/participant	the party/parties or participant(s) represented or advocated for by this advocate
14	Attorney Type	Type of Attorney	Private Attorney Public defender Legal aid/legal services attorney Protection & Advocacy (P&A) attorney Allied Legal Professional GAL/best-interest attorney Other

15	Advocate type	Type of non-attorney court-appointed advocate	Navigator CASA/non-attorney GAL Court visitor other
-----------	----------------------	---	--

In participant information (tab 2), “ever represented” indicates that the person had an attorney at some point in the case. For thorough evaluation, capturing the dates of representation allows the court to analyze whether a person was represented at any given point of the case. To do this:

1. Identify the key case events (Family hearing type)
2. Identify the relevant dates (Scheduled hearing/event date)
3. Identify the Hearing/event outcome
4. Calculate the period of representation for each party (from advocate/attorney entry date and advocate/attorney end date)
5. Calculate if the held hearing or event occurred before, during, or after the period of representation

Tab 4: Status

Keeping track of a case status can be especially important for family cases. Specifically in cases involving dissolution/divorce, cases that arise from previously decided dissolution/divorce cases are reopened for custody, support, and/or visitation cases instead of being classified as a New Filing. In this sense, keeping track of the case status is important for additional filings. Similarly, cases dealing with dissolution/divorce and legal separations may fluctuate between inactive and reactivated if parties try to reconcile in the middle of proceedings.

Table 9: Case status

Data Element #	Data Element	Definition	Values
1	Case Status Date	Date of status change	Date case status set

Additional guidance on case status definitions can be found in The State Court Guide to Statistical Reporting.

Tabs 5 & 6: Pleadings/Motions and Filings

While information in pleadings and docket notes are important to tracking family cases, it can be useful for courts to keep data on the pleadings, motions, and filings of a case in a way that allows for a holistic view of the docket. These data points can allow for identification of patterns.

Table 10: Pleadings, motions & filings

Data Element #	Data Element	Definition	Values
1	Motion/Filing Title	Title of motion or filing	Text
2	Date Filed	Date pleading or motion was filed	Date

Tab 8: Orders

Court actions are captured through orders, which can be in response to pleadings, hearings, events, or monitoring activities. Capturing key data elements in a case management system allows for better tracking of cases. Entering information about services allows courts to monitor compliance (or to track when services are ordered but unavailable). Service orders can include counseling, substance use treatment, parenting classes, supervised visitation, assisted outpatient treatment, hospitalization/inpatient treatment, hybrid AOT/Hospitalization, or other types of services. Medical, substance use, psychological, competency, custody, and home study evaluations can also be ordered.

Table 12: Orders

Tab 17: Alternative Dispute Resolution

Alternative dispute resolution (ADR) is common in family justice cases in many jurisdictions. As long as the court ordered ADR, the case remains on active status within the court.

Referral date, ADR date, type of ADR, and results of the ADR are all data elements that should be collected.

Data Element #	Data Element	Definition	Values
1	Referral Date	Date of referral to ADR/ODR	Date

Key Data Elements for Triage

Efforts are underway to automate a family justice triage process that could be applied nationally, with the intent to provide qualitatively better and more timely justice for families. In a convening held April 2022, court experts from the US and Canada identified data elements that could hold greater predictive potential in the triaging of cases. A comprehensive list of the factors discussed are presented for future study, loosely organized by possible domains.⁷
