

ICM Fellows Program

Since 1970, nearly 1,300 court leaders have become Fellows of the Institute for Court Management. The ICM Fellows Program is the highest and most demanding certification available from ICM and is the culminating certificate in ICM's stackable certificate program. Graduates include state and trial court administrators, judges, clerks of court in both state and Federal courts, and academics and consultants in forty-seven states, the District of Columbia, and eleven countries. Becoming an ICM Fellow is a process of continual professional development.

"As a court administrator, it is difficult to take the time for professional development. The ICM Fellows Program is a worthy investment. This program is guaranteed to enhance your skills and knowledge of the judiciary and court management in an encouraging and conducive learning environment. The camaraderie of learning with court leaders from across the country was invaluable. You will be provided with tools to improve practice in your jurisdiction at every level of the court system."
